Quit kicking up all that silt! Were you raised in a barn?

That's adorable. And pretty smart -- the octopus keeps its shelter with it, even when it doesn't need it*.

* Which makes it a 'tool-using species' rather than just an opportunist, like a hermit crab.

And yet, scientists have found that they don't have what we would recognize as individual personalities. Fascinating.

I have never before wanted to cuddle an octopus for being so brave and clever.

That ~is~ extremely brave and clever.

I never considered cuddling an octopus. Hmm... Wonder if they like warm water? goes off to find out, if possible

It's not a house, it's an RV.

With legs.

Hmmm, a steampunk inspired octopus?

Well, isn't that a thing?

They open jars, too. If they ever figure out they can benefit from raising each others' offspring we are seriously screwed.
